The CEIE Department of GMU has a partnership with the Civil Engineering Institute that began in 1989.

The CEI is comprised of representatives from engineering firms, contractors, public utilities, developers, government agencies, research enterprises – any organization that understands the importance of having an outstanding school of engineering in the heart of Virginia’s economic engine, and integral to the National Capital Region.

It is a great forum for industry professionals to give back to our profession by helping to develop our future engineers.

If interested, see any of the CEI members present in today’s meeting.

Civil Engineering Institute

- Access to excellent pool of students for hire (full-time, Co-op, internship) from ABET accredited civil engineering program, and MS students from civil (structural, geotechnical, environmental, water resources) and construction project management programs
- Participation in the Annual Fall Mason Civil Engineering Career Fair
- Interaction with faculty, and access to cutting edge research and expertise
- Access to opportunities to collaborate with faculty on projects
- Input and impact on curriculum to address industry needs
- Opportunities to expand knowledge of industry and your organization through classroom presentations to students/faculty, workshops, seminars
- Opportunity to expand professional network through interaction with Civil Engineering Institute Members
- Service opportunities for you and your organization through student mentoring, and assistance with student extracurricular activities
- Impact, involvement with, and credit for support of the activities, growth and development of one of the fastest growing civil engineering programs in the Commonwealth and the largest public University in the Commonwealth of Virginia
